INNOVATIVE ART SERVICES MOVE ARTWORK NETWORK

Due to diversified art services and successful online art sales, Artwork Network has continued to grow in the face of challenging economic trends. Offering more than a gallery, with over eighty artists in their online membership, Artwork Network links collectors, designers and businesses and provides art rotation services in a variety of locations throughout the Denver metropolitan area. Moving to a larger space on May 1st, Artwork Network will be at 878-1 Santa Fe Drive, just around the corner from their current location at 855 Inca.

“Denver’s Art District on Santa Fe has been good to us and as our services and clients continued to increase, we did not even consider leaving the District. We just needed a larger venue to showcase our artists more effectively”, said Alan Kircher, Founder and CEO of Artwork Network.

855 Inca will continue to be managed by Artwork Network and will be re-branded as Inca Street Studios by Artwork Network. Inca Street Studios houses artist studios and will be the new home of Translations Gallery who will be moving from their 8th and Santa Fe location.

The expanded location will also offer 1500 sq. ft of space available to rent for events, as well as an additional 3000 sq. ft. of artist studio space, downstairs.

Both the Artwork Network showroom and Inca Street Studios by Artwork Network will be open on First Friday May 2nd.
